TEN YEARS LATER NOTES

The eighties arrival is here; and you saw it first on Chaosium Digest!

To me, Ghostbusters the Role Playing Game was the best send up of role playing I had ever seen. So much so, that it did hamper the playability of the game itself. The rules were a joke. Often literally. At the same time, the general philosophy of "Keep the game moving and ignore everything else" destroyed my belief in good game design but improved my GMing skills 100%. Recomended for anyone taking the whole thing too seriously.

This scenario is very much in the mindset of the game, which actually is more DUMB and DUMBER than either GHOSTBUSTERS or the THE BLUES BROTHERS, and since it was written by a Brit, some pythonisms did find their way in also. It should ideally be played at the end of a long campaign, and the session should be liberally lubed with beer...

The amount of obvious connections between GB and BB are best left to devotees of Saturday Night Live (we didn't get to see it over here), but you may wish to know that Bill Murray's part in Ghostbusters was originally to be played by John Belushi.

Still sadly missed.
Its 150 miles to Chicago. We've got a full tank of gas, half a packet of cigarettes, it's daylight and we're wearing Ecto-goggles

NOTE

Because of the somewhat epic nature of the climax, this scenario is best played at the end of a long campaign. All those vengeful NPCs from previous encounters can add to the impact of the adventure. Perhaps the persecuted victims of your players' previous exploits have grouped together in a sort of self-help group and moved to the quiet town of Landisburg to try and forget their collective trauma. Perhaps they've been biding their time and listening intently to police broadcasts for months. This could be the emotional, cathartic, reconciliation rabid enemies need to become balanced members of society again.

Or maybe not.

PART 1: THE PROMOTIONAL TOUR

For some reason, Mr. Tully has rewarded you with some PR work a long way from New York. Away from the grime and business of the Big Apple! Away from the grim weather! Away from the unpredictable natives! Yes! Its a promotional visit of... Chicago.

So far, the Chicago media hasn't treated you with much respect. The last news report on you came shortly after Nemo the Scuba Diving Badger.

So, it has been hell all week. Living uncomfortably on GBI expenses at the Chicago Hilton, the players have had to deal with non-existent reporters and an inexhaustible room service. But, no worries. It's Friday. They will just have to make a fresh start on the Monday.

HEDONISM NOTE: An entire week dodging responsibility in the Imperial suite at the Hilton could be a scenario in itself. The Hilton also has a very strict policy on pets for instance (Possibly not strict enough, but more about Sparky the Wonder Dog later). If crazed guerilla warfare with the furnishings does break out, don't forget the crabby neighbour across the hall who needs his sleep (See the Superbowl warm-up in the film "Where the Buffalo Roam").
FRIDAY. MAY 30th. 21:00

Assuming they haven't destroyed it, a man visits the player's room.

FATHER CHARLES

| BRAINS | 3 | Remember blues numbers | 6 |

| MOVES  | 3 | Play Keyboard            | 7 |
| MUSCLE | 2 | Bash Bible               | 5 |

Goal: Serve Humanity
Distinctive Mannerisms: Blind, but with a Jedi-like awareness.

Father Charles has been helped out before by Venkman's gang. Just before the Zuul problem, Winston and Ray rid his hotel room of a Class 1 repeater. Since then, he has provided certain unnamed materials for GBI. But, he needs help again, and this time on his own turf. The Sesame St. Orphanage for Ugly Children which he helps run for the church, has had a terrible week. On Monday, they received a court order to pay $50000 in taxes by June 1st or have the place closed down. But, this isn't even the real tragedy.

If the church would let them (which it won't) they could try and sell THE BLACK POTTERY MADONNA OF ST. TESCOE, An Object of Great Occult Significance, which is the orphans' most prized possession. But even this impossible option is not open to them, as the Madonna was stolen Wednesday night! The police (who are on "the take"), not believing anything that valuable would be kept in the orphanage, and fearing some publicity stunt to stop the orphanage from closing, have invoked the Hitchcock clause and will not interfere.

Father Charles believes the Madonna could be extremely dangerous in the wrong hands and asks the players to find and return it for the good of their souls.

Now, since the Ghostbusters are not being offered any money at all, and this is not strictly kicking spectres, they might refuse. If they do, a bright light will shine down through the gaping hole where the windows were and the players will immediately get the feeling of a divine presence. Before they get a chance to Vape the Holy Spirit, they should realize that this assignment is no less than A MISSION FROM GOD. By accepting this they will no doubt receive supernatural assistance now and in the future. They should be suitably awestruck.

Stress to the players that this assignment should not be refused unless they want to see the top of the Ghost Dice a lot more often. If threats don't work, beg. If that doesn't work, halt the game, and present them with a large case of beer (Player Aid #1). It will make them more contemplative and they'll need it later.

Father Charles urges haste; if the Madonna can be recovered before the orphanage closes, he can try and ask permission of the Pope to sell it to a museum. He might also hint that this item could be very dangerous in the wrong hands.

If they fail BRAINS rolls, Father Charles suggests they start looking for clues at the Orphanage.

Luckily the players have an entire ectomobile full of new, untested equipment with them. Among the devastatingly expensive pieces of Spengler Science they have been asked to wave at the Chicago Media are:

NEW EQUIPMENT FOR GHOSTBUSTERS

EGES (Ectomobile Ghost Engagement System)
This allows operators to engage and capture ghosts from within the Ectomobile itself! Ray had only just finished installing it before Venkman ordered the players to Chicago. It is completely untested, possibly dangerous and looks flashy, BUT YOU ARE NOT TO USE IT. It consists of:
The Ghost Trap Mortar
Turret mounted on the roof and operated from within the ectomobile by an Ghostbuster using Moves; this can fire a ghosttrap out to a distance of 40 feet! (Sadly it will not take the connecting wire with it, making it useless as anything but a one shot launcher of broken Ghost Traps.)

Sonic Transmission of Ectopresence Reduction, Ectomobile Operated (STERO)
This chaotic masterpiece is centred around a 21st century grammar phone funnel mounted on the turret next to the mortar. More surround sound artillery is spotted about the roof. It is intended to weaken and paralyse any apparition short of a Metaspectre; this device is a doomed experiment in anti-ghostsonics. It requires one operator using Brains (!).

Once activated, there is one deafening whine of feedback and then a doom laden pause before the Apocalyptic sound of Tom Jones’s "It's Not Unusual” is launched in a earsplitting barrage of sound from the car in the vague direction of wherever the turret happens to be pointing. A difficult Brains roll is required to prevent vaporizing any windows in that vicinity and a Very Difficult roll is required to turn it off. A Ghost Result will result in temporary deafness for the operator (role play with hand signals for a game day) and terrifying electrical feed back running through the ectomobile which could have any kind of effect ("Congratulations... you have decided to clean the car...").

Egon effectively deduced that this particular sonic wave played at very high volume resulted in deep, paralytic shock in most spirits. The fact that it has a similar effect on anything sentient never occurred. If, as a GM, you cannot obtain a copy of this sanity crushing sound then anything in a similar vein will do. (Barry Manilow, ABBA). Players might want to play their own music but this requires a Very Difficult Brains Roll to rebuild it, assuming it still works. Perhaps a secondary, morale boosting music selection exists with a choice of "Ride of the Valkyrie" (topical) or the theme from Mission Impossible (tragic).

Whatever it is, play it loud.

Other stuff:

The Machine That Goes Ping
A large red box with red flashing lights mounted behind the driver. The ultimate in flashy hardware, all it actually seems to do is go "PING!" at completely random intervals (though a large red “Manual” button can give one ping on order). And, it cannot be turned off or tampered with, as it seem to be almost indestructible. Sonar? No. Psychological Infuriator? Possibly. Egon Spengler's only answer is that it's very expensive and he's working on a man portable version.

All Terrain Spirit Pursuit Vehicle (A.T.S.P.V.)
Ray's contribution. A Space Hopper. Comes in a flashy flat, black box with the name and "A.T.S.P.V.-IN CASE OF EMERGENCY ONLY" on the top in evil letters. As the box is opened, the contents inflate immediately.

An added technical problem in this scenario is the lack of a containment grid. In our campaign, a ghost trap will only hold a weak ghost for 24 hours, and if the nearest containment grid is in New York, this can make for an interesting epilogue to the scenario. The players also have at their disposal anything they can rip off from the hotel (fending off a demon with towels and soap will get extra Brownie points) and a wide range of interesting but tacky local souvenirs. Lucky concrete overshoes for instance.

Arcane Research.
Whichever ghost tome the players have will tell them this about the missing object after an easy brains roll:

"Made by Dario Tescoe, the patron Saint of Mass Produced Artifacts and Strange But Lovable Children, in Genoa in 1791, the BLACK POTTERY MADONNA is one of the great misused Christian artifacts. Charged with spiritual power it was intended for use by missionaries to help the case of good heathens in hell."
"Used in a ceremony over the heathen grave, it reputedly proved to heathen relatives that god even cared for ignorant savages in the netherworld, even if they went to hell anyway. Unfortunately, the Madonna fell into the wrong hands and became linked with ceremonies bringing spirits back from the spirit world. According to legend, these attempts nearly always failed to produce the desired result, possibly because of the contrived nature of the ritual, which can only effectively be performed each year, at midnight on the 31st of May. PLEASE REFER TO 2ND EDITION ERRATA SHEET."

Yes, this occult book has an errata sheet. Feel free to keep them in suspense for a while by having them find it later or have them leave it in New York. It is significant.

Honest.

"FURTHER NOTES ON THE BLACK POTTERY MADONNA"

"A recent study of one of the rituals performed in Haiti in 1923 has suggested that the whole ceremony and perhaps the item itself is flawed in some way. (Later descriptions of the Madonna’s weight do not coincide with earlier testimony, suggesting clever fakes may also exist.)

"One account of a failed resurrection ceremony describes how the Madonna succeeded only in returning the spirit to the sacrificial component of the spell shortly before she was killed. At least 20 different resurrection spells are known to have been written for the Madonna, using pacts with the Great Old Ones SHUG BUBBLEBATH and YEUCH SAUSAGE."

Bad news huh?

PART 2: CLUES TO THE ILLINOIS NAZIS

The players will probably set out on the Morning of Saturday, May 31st. Throughout this entire adventure, the gamemaster should keep in mind, and constantly remind the players of, two deadlines. If the Madonna is to be used in an Arcana ritual, that will occur at Midnight on the 31st. The $50,000 in taxes must be paid to the IRS by June 1st.

Travelling to the orphanage from the hotel will take only ten minutes. The players are met in the seedy downtown street by hordes of cheering children of all sorts of odd shapes and sizes. One, for instance, is very tall with long yellow hair (feathers?), a very large nose, eyes like billiard balls and an irritating voice. Another is very hairy and so ill and dirty he appears to be blue in colour, though the big smile he wears compensates for his obvious lack of intelligence and irritating voice. Come to think of it, they all have irritating voices.

Joyfully filling the road as they are, an average Drive or Moves roll is needed to avoid hitting one of them, but as these are tough street kids, failure will only result in a few months in hospital. Having got inside the orphanage, the players are met by a legendary nun referred to as The Penguin.

THE PENGUIN
Disapproving Nun with Shady Past.

| BRAINS | 4     | Scathe  | 8     |

| MOVES  | 2     | Wield Cane/Umbrella | 5     |
| MUSCLE | 2     | Bash Bible | 6     |

Goal: Serve Humanity
Distinctive Mannerisms: Wears a monocle and uses a long cigarette holder to stir her hot milk. Everything she says sounds like a warning. Oddly reminiscent of Burgess Meredith. Unknown to all, she was once a famous male criminal called Arnold Cobblepott, who eventually grew tired of crime and changed sex to live the life of a nun. The Penguin very much disapproves of Science in the spirit world, but as the Ghostbusters are all good catholics (of course they are), she will tolerate them.
The Penguin shows the players to the chapel and explains that on Wednesday night at approx 21:00 three men entered the orphanage wearing black uniforms and carrying Lugers. The only one brave enough (read: stupid enough) to put up any resistance to them was the orphanage hero (and soon to be mega-star) Sparky The Wonder Dog.

The players are introduced to Sparky. Bouncy and enthusiastic, Sparky makes Lassie seem like Oppenheimer. Make him especially irritating, because at the end he will be presented to the team as a gesture of thanks. The local media love him already, marvelling at his uncanny intelligence (read: luck).

Once forced upon the Ghostbusters, no interview will be without its compulsory questions about the welfare of the People's hero. At last, a superstar in their midst. A campaign all in itself, Sparky can make just checking out of a hotel seem like A Bridge Too Far.

The Penguin informs the players that before escaping with the Madonna, the Men in Black were attacked by Sparky, who managed to rip the pants of one of the villains. Using the pants themselves as clues is somewhat difficult, as The People's Hero and Children's Friend subsequently ate them. Luckily a clue dropped from the pocket of their Leader in the struggle. A receipt for 20 brand new pairs of jackboots! The shop concerned, "Nazis-R-Us", is located on the other side of town. Residual PKE readings of surprising strength can be found in the cabinet were the Madonna once rested. Having aggravated the Penguin, the players will hopefully follow up their lead. Try and waste their time on the journey over -- if your campaign has no irritating sub-plot to catch up with them, try this one:

Optional Sub plot

This requires a character with the goal Sex. One of his great close escapes was almost exactly a year ago, when he found himself engaged to the daughter of a powerful Mafia boss. He doesn't remember? Well, he was very drunk. The upshot was that he just didn't turn up for the wedding. Jilted her at the altar. And yes, she does coincidentally look very much like Carrie Fisher...

Goal: Vengeance
Distinguishing Characteristics: Beautifully manicured fingernails and an uncanny resemblance to a character from Star Wars.

Thanks to her father, she has just about every lethal man portable weapon of mass destruction available. Despite her skill in using them however, the players are on a Mission From God and are only ever reduced to stumbling out of annihilated scenery. The vengeful girlfriend will not damage the ecto-mobile, however, as her one bit of romance with the character occurred on its rear acceleration couch (Back seat).

Although initially using hit and run tactics, the vengeful girlfriend will eventually try and engineer a face-to-face confrontation. Luckily, she is liable to melt in such a situation, depending on whether the player can talk his way out of such a situation...
The Mission From God

Worth a reminder here is that the laws of probability themselves are slanted in the player's favour. Normal to impossible actions are made normally, but really silly stunts, especially in cars, have a very good (GMs discretion) chance of succeeding. Bottom line is, of course, if it's funny, it's feasible.

In addition the players might also realize in the course of their chaos that the local police are having a hard time catching up with them. Don't give the police a chance to work off their hopefully growing grievances until the end. If the ghostbusters are being careful, start with a wrongful speeding ticket and go from there.

Back to the Plot

Nazis-R-Us is in fact a very camp shop. At the counter today are Arnold and Gervaise.

While Arnold spends ages searching through till receipts looking for the transaction and trying to remember where they were working that day, Gervaise will compliment the players on their uniforms, ask where they're from, saying "get much R n' R ? - coz there's this place we know.." etc.

Meanwhile, out in the street, Christians Against Deviants have begun a demonstration, closely covered by the TV news crews that have been ignoring the team all week.

Eventually Arnold will deduce that the transaction was performed by the Manager himself, Mr Kelso, who is currently on vacation. Just as the team are on the way out, however, Gervaise will remember that Mr Kelso arranged to have dinner/lunch (whatever the time is) at his brother's very exclusive restaurant: The Leningrad Cowboy (complete with live band). Alternately, he could be at home with his paranoid Bette Davis of a Mother, who'll be convinced that the Ghostbusters are in some way official.

Assuming the Ghostbusters get to Mr Kelso without too much attendant havoc, threats will be needed before he reveals that the boots were indeed ordered by a group calling itself The National Socialist and White Peoples Party. Their address? A disused ballroom called the Empire just outside Landisburg in Illinois.

Now, to preserve the chances of The Race Against Time on the 1st of June, you might have to delay the Ghostbusters, preferably having them arrive at midnight, just before the Nazis do the dirty deed. Maybe they press the wrong button in the Ectomobile ("Congratulations. You have decided to clean the inside of the car. 10.. 9.. etc") or perhaps the Machine that Goes Ping just stops working.

If you want to stray unpredictably into the plot of the film, you could have Mr Kelso warn ominously that Landisburg is watched constantly by the Nazis and that they go in disguise... as musicians. Coincidentally, on that night, Landisburg's night spot, "Bob's Country Bunker", awaits a Country and Western band called "The Good Ol' Boys", who will unfortunately arrive at 23.00, an hour and a half too late. (Needless to say, they could also go as the Leningrad Cowboys, another silly film, if the idiocy level needs to go up another level of magnitude.)
PART 3: THE ILLINOIS NAZIS

If the Ghostbusters decide that dressing up is beneath them (or more likely beyond them), but decide they want to scout around for info in the Country bunker, you have the chance to play out that D&D bar scene you know so well:

1. Suspicious entrance through swinging doors. Terrifying liberal eating rednecks all turn round, hideously deformed and twisted...

2. Ask the barkeep for a drink. "Milk" could provoke a barfight, which is inconsistent with scouting.

3. Choose music on juke box. Tom Jones' famous country ditty "COP KILLER" (an unfortunate supply error) could also produce the above.

4. Break the ice by telling a joke. Another sure chance for a barfight.

5. Interrogate the barman. Needless to say this is futile. He is the last person told about anything and still thinks Nixon is president. If questioned about the old haunted ballroom on the hill, he will point to a man drinking on his own in the corner. "That's Hank the Librarian. He did some work for the new owners".

6. Man sitting drinking in the corner. Cowboy boots, stetson, Chaps (cowboy flares) and tiny spectacles on the end of his nose. Hank Herman has spent weeks sitting in that corner waiting for his Mission From Godot, sorry, God.

As the town literate, he was given the job of checking local libraries for a certain book, just in case the new owners of the ballroom couldn't find it at the Miskatonic. As the Nazi's copy of the Mumbojumbicon was apparently 70 years overdue and they weren't allowed to take anything else out, it was just as well Hank found a copy of the book in question, especially as they needed it by midnight tonight (And yes, of course it's a 1st Edition without errata). He doesn't remember seeing any Madonnas at the ballroom but knows they've been hiding something recently.

If the players are nice to him or if they just buy him a drink, he'll add that there are about 100 Nazis in total, led by a very confused guy called Gerry, who was until Thursday a nobody, but since then has developed an outrageous German accent and a nasty habit of spinning his head 360 degrees while spitting pea soup.

He also might reveal that the safest way in is via a tunnel that can be reached by following a nearby storm drain. Nazis? Naaahhh. They're just ordinary country folk who like dressing up. They mean no harm. Except to Jews, Blacks, Catholics, City-folk and Vertebrates.

Meanwhile....

On this very night, with the power of the Madonna the Nazis intend to bring the spirit of the Fuhrer back from the dead. Helping them is the restless spirit of Hitler's chief adviser on the occult, Herman Plenck, who was run over by a tank in 1942 and returned on Thursday night to aid the Nazis by possessing lowly Gerald Wagner.

Plenck himself is quite a force, making the quarter finals of Earth's Sorcerer Supreme in the 30's before recognising his real talent lay in the sadly more subtle path of Tea Magic. It was while perfecting a particularly arcane and refreshing strain of Earl Grey just outside Stalingrad that he met his appointment with Fate, or to be more precise, a T-34.

Gerry usually drives a taxi (surprise, surprise) but since Thursday he's been on a Mission From The Fuhrer and so now drives a stolen Porsche.

Getting in to The Empire Ballroom

Largely derelict, there are three ways in. The front way is guarded by two Nazis with SMGs. They all, conveniently enough, have the same stats as Gerry, so possibly can be tricked.

They are good friends. Good friends for a reason. They share the same secret. No, they don't know Arnold and Gervaise, but they have kept secret from the rest of the guys something that would cause others to question their Aryan perfection. They are both tone deaf.

If the players get past them, the dimly lit lobby beckons. Double doors opposite open onto a room full of at least 100 Nazis but the stairs on either side of the lobby lead up to two balconies which overlook the stage (Swinging from chandeliers available).

The second way in is round the back, through the toilet windows, but as this is on the second floor, a Moves roll is needed to get up the nearby drainpipe. Passages lead from the toilets to either side of the stage. (Optionally you could have Arnold and Gervaise in the toilets at the same time, doing, well... whatever).

The sneaky way in, of course, is through the storm drain. The two Nazi guards here luckily enough are big Ghostbuster enthusiasts and will ask for autographs for their children. They are determined no-one should pass however and unless a particularly clever ruse is used they will have be hit on the head. Although the entrance is only about a quarter of a mile, the ectomobile can only be taken half way owing to the low ceiling. When walking through the dark tunnel Ghostbusters without ecto-goggles must make an moderate Moves roll to prevent falling in the mud and temporarily losing 1 point of Cool.

The concealed entrance is Difficult to see without ecto-goggles but once through there the Ghostbusters will be in the labyrinth of tunnels that exist beneath every theatre. A Very Difficult Move or See roll will notice the concealed trapdoor that leads up behind the stage. Otherwise, the players will wander around in the dark until they stumble across a storeroom full of (describe candles to them) fireworks, stored here until the triumphant return of the fuhrer. The ceiling is merely floorboards and the sound of chanting can be heard from above...

The Ritual

The ritual is nearing its climax: Gerry/Plenck stands on stage before a Golden dish on a tripod. Between the legs of the tripod stands the Madonna. Kneeling in front, wearing a red gown, is a Nazi who bears a stunning resemblance to Rocky from the Horror show of the same name. Gerry/Plenck holds in one hand a live chicken and in the other a Nazi dagger. The large crowd in front of him is deathly quiet. (Get the accent right.)

"Gods of the Old and Outer Heed Me! By words of the Mumbojumbicon, the power of Shug Bubblebath and the glory of Isaac Azathoth I offer you this blood sacrifice of white meat that shall not clog up your cosmic arteries. Further we offer you this perfect human, that he might be the vessel of the spirit you will provide! The spirit of the Leader - ADOLF SCHICKLEGRUBER, sorry, HITLER!"
Dramatic entrances from off stage or even from the balcony via Errol Flynn stunts are comparatively straight forward, but things are more awkward if the Ghostbusters are trapped in the room full of fireworks. The quickest way up is through the ceiling, directly beneath the stage. Proton packs are easily capable of cutting a large hole BUT

1. There a 50% chance of them setting off the fireworks but

2. There is an excellent chance of the ceremony dropping onto them.

In any case, this time the Ghostbusters are just too late, because, before they can disrupt things:

At the climax of the chant the Madonna suddenly glows like the sun and a bolt of black lightening bursts through a nearby window to envelope the chicken in energy. Chaos follows. The crowd, most of whom were not expecting anything to happen, start to momentarily panic.

In the on-stage confusion the Madonna is thrown and somehow dropped or otherwise hit in such a way that it smashes, revealing a hollow inside stuffed with Kruggerands (Gold coins). About $50,000 worth.

Now without leading the players in any particular direction: THEY HAVE ENOUGH THERE TO SAVE THE ORPHANAGE IF THEY GET THE GOLD TO THE COOK COUNTY ASSESSORS OFFICE TOMORROW! (The Madonna is now worthless to anyone).

The Nazi Rocky is still sentient and therefore very confused. The most obvious clue to the state of the chicken is the way it tries to address the audience. If the players still haven't cottoned on, have the chicken do the goosestep. Makes Zuul look pretty insignificant doesn't it?

PART 4: THE CHASE

Getting out of the Empire ballroom might get quite hectic, even without the possible inclusion of The Vengeful Girlfriend and those eager policemen, but it's nothing to the reception they players are going to get in Chicago.

After the predictable verbal opening to the chase, for which the Ghostbuster who remembers receives 5 Brownie points ("It's a 106 miles to Chicago..."), we must sadly jump ahead a few hours to dawn. Valuable time has been wasted escaping the Landisburg area. Perhaps it was the necessity of driving through the middle of Bob's Country Bunker that annoyed the police and the Landisburg natives, but for whatever the reason, everyone that has a grudge against the Ghostbusters (possibly from scenarios long before this one) appears behind them, in a car, after their blood.

The chase itself can be resolved using Car Wars rules for real edge of the seat realism: assuming you want to be playing this scenario beyond the end of the millennium. Alternately, you can use the rules provided here and produce your own edge of the seat realism.

(Maybe you could play it out in your car. No I'm serious. Just don't try and drive at the same time. Tell your neighbours Tom Jones car parties are the latest thing.)

This is organized as a set of programmed encounters, something like those kiddies gamebooks we all got fed up with. As well as the different routes available, each encounter has a set of 4 different speeds, together with a difficulty level. If the driver exceeds the number with a Moves or Drive roll, he takes the indicated damage and causes the indicated effects. If he or she fails, the car takes double damage. Each car has structure points, meant to represent the overall strength of the car.

Ecto 1 starts with 100 structure points but cannot reach the highest speed level unless some on the spot (or on the move!) Weird Science modifications are made, such as rigging the power plant to run off a proton pack. This has a difficulty level of 25+. The viability of performing this on the move is up to the GM.

It is possible the Ghostbusters have ripped off some other car. Police cars have the same performance as Ecto 1 but only 75 structure points. They do have nifty radios and sirens however, and a potential for causing a great deal of confusion.
Gerry's Porsche, or any other sportscar for that matter, can go as fast as you want but has only 50 structure points (They don't make cars like they used to). Only the Ectomobile of course has The Machine That Goes Ping. If you wish you could keep track of all the other car's structure points as well, if you are a complete numeric masochist (or play Car Wars).

Encounters

Having been chased by the Nazis, et al, for most of the night with only Egon's lean burn fuel system, The Machine That Goes Ping and good luck keeping them ahead, the players now reach the outskirts of Chicago, with the police in hot pursuit. Some old grudge has ensured that even the National Guard are waiting for them.

The fact that the players have probably broken every speed limit in Illinois, by now, and that hasn't helped. The radio is full of hatred: "Use of unnecessary force in the apprehension of the Ghostbusters has been approved." But don't worry, they are on A MISSION FROM GOD. Just as well, as the Cook County Assessors Office closes for an extended lunch in an hour!

1. ILLEGAL EXIT OF A HIGHWAY

About half a mile out, with Chicago almost in sight ahead, the Ghostbusters can see a heavy police roadblock. The road behind is full of police cars (they seem to have lost the Nazis when the cops started to appear in numbers). If the players are feeling really crazy, they can crash straight through. This will cost them 30 structure points and 3 police cars. Go to encounter 2 and then straight to 5.

The alternative is to leave the little road they're on by cutting across a quarter mile of flat countryside, climbing up a steep bank and jumping the barrier to get them onto the Expressway leading downtown.

Special Effects

They have a choice of 3 speeds (4 if they have a faster car).

- SLOW= +10, Lose 3 Structure points, Roll another +10 Drive or Moves to avoid being headed off. ONE COP CAR ROLLS DOWN HILL.
- FAST= +5, Lose 5 SP, TWO COP CARS ROLL DOWN HILL
- VERY FAST= +8, Lose 8 SP, FOUR COP CARS ROLL DOWN HILL ONE FLIES AFTER YOU AND LANDS ON ANOTHER CAR (A NAZI).
- INDIANAPOLIS 500= +12, Lose 10 SP, AS ABOVE BUT LEADING CAR LANDS IN AN 18 WHEELER

Remember the "+12" is the difficulty level which must be exceeded by a Moves or Drive roll to avoid taking double the indicated structure point damage.

Go to 2.

2. DRIVING WITHOUT DUE CARE AND ATTENTION

Here on the Expressway, things seem much faster and the cops haven't taken long to catch up. Was that a sign for Downtown?

If driving Slow(+15) or Fast(+10), make drive rolls to avoid being caught. If going faster, make +5 rolls to avoid hitting something or taking off (Lose 10 SP. Players who drive everywhere at INDIANAPOLIS 500 are optionally subject to relativistic effects. Having them arrive before the scenario starts will teach them a lesson). The players now have the choice of staying on the expressway (Go to 3) or taking a quieter route with less cops (Go to 4).
3. FAILURE TO STOP AT A RED LIGHT

Oh dear. The lights have changed. The players could stop and hope to fight the cops off, but even then they'll be right after them when the lights change. If they go through....

Special Effects

SLOW= Roll +10 to avoid being hit for 5 SP.

FAST= Roll +15 to avoid 10 SP (F*%#@ng Volvos).

V.FAST= Roll +5 to avoid being grazed for 5 SP, ONE CAR DEMOLISHES THE VOLVO

INDY 500= Safe!, 2 COP CARS AND THE VOLVO HIT A GARBAGE TRUCK.

Go to 5.

4. FLYING A CAR WITHOUT A LICENSE

There are certainly less cops around here but isn't there a river on this route? Tell the players they are heading toward a small traffic jam and they are being chased by a police helicopter. They pass a sign: MAYOR DALEY MEMORIAL BRIDGE.

Yes, that bridge. The one that surprise, surprise, is currently being raised to allow a river patrol boat underneath. Pursuit is close. If they stop, the chopper will be on them.

First, the players have got to negotiate the traffic. Tell them they're heading toward the cars ahead and must make some nifty maneuvers to get past them. Moderate rolls to slow down if they're going fast, then a difficult one. Not to avoid taking damage but to avoid losing a (another?) level of speed when they hit the start of the bridge/ramp!

Once the players are ready to take the jump:

Special Effects

SLOW= * Oh dear. See below.

FAST= +10 to avoid 5 SP loss, OTHERWISE PERFECT. ONLOOKERS GET OUT OF CARS AND APPLAUD.

V.FAST= +10 to avoid 5 SP loss, OVERSHOT. SPARKS OFF THE FRONT.

The chase helicopter calls up a whole fleet of police cars on the other side of the river. Gaining momentum rapidly you go to 5.

INDY 500= * Oh dear. See below.

* The Wrong Stuff

There is a slight bang from the rear of the Ectomobile and the covers on those stylish rear fins blow off. Busy chap that Mr Spengler is, he completely forgot to remove that experimental JATO (Jet Assisted Take Off) system that Rays' Soviet Space Agency friends installed at great expense. The Ectomobile's computer monitoring system has decided that you're going too slow and need impetuous or that you're going too fast, you're trying to reach orbit, and it's doing its best to get you there. Like I say: Experimental.

With shocking suddenness the two solid fuel boosters in the rear fins kick in. Make the players do some therapeutic face stretching exercises. Then, a green head up display flashes across the windscreen IN RUSSIAN.

An Impossible Roll on anything the GM sees fit will abort the ten second burn just after they start the jump. They complete the Jump at VFast speed and suffer ejection countdown described below.
If they fail to abort, the boosters burn for the full 10 seconds, then cut out. Describe a favourite scene from "The Right Stuff": Stars shining dimly through the strangely dark blue sky... etc. The front of the car dips as the Ectomobile goes into a dive. As Chicago appears, slowly, almost serenely over the bonnet, and a brief period of weightlessness causes much jollity in the car (watch those parking tickets fly), the automatic ejection countdown begins IN RUSSIAN.

Half way down, gosh it must be windy in there, a message flashes in English warning that:

ANY ROOF MOUNTED EQUIPMENT MUST BE JETTISONED BEFORE EJECTION

indicating a button on the dashboard that will fire roof mounted explosive bolts. When this is pressed a muffled bang can be heard from the roof followed immediately by the message:

EJECT SEQUENCE ABORTED
UNKNOWN DORSAL CONFIGURATION

The EGES system, installed after the JATO, still sits defiantly on the roof. Its ability to sustain damage and yet still be thoroughly inconvenient is demonstrated now as all its functions go completely ape. If the players have already heard its full repertoire, play it again at double speed. Mercifully, it is somewhat muffled by the sound of the wind at terminal velocity. The only way to turn it off now is to physically cut it off the roof with a proton pack.

Luckily, before the ghostbusters go splat, Ray's parachute braking system saves them.

The Ectomobile settles fairly gently onto an empty road heading toward town, while the chase helicopter meanwhile takes emergency evasive action and loses them. Go to 6.

5. TAKING RIGHT HAND TURN FAR IN EXCESS OF THE SPEED LIMIT

Suddenly you are hurtling along a road beneath an elevated railway: an exhilarating experience until a building site appears in front of you. You must make a 90 degree right hand turn right now!

Special Effects

SLOW= Safe, No effects.

FAST= +5 (On Cool) to avoid skidding, TWO COP CARS SKID AND HIT EACH OTHER.

FAST= +5, Lose 5 SP. AS ABOVE BUT FOUR MORE HIT THE FIRST TWO.

INDY 500= +10, Lose 15 SP (sideswipe), AS ABOVE BUT PILE UP EVENTUALLY INCLUDES OVER 20 CARS. POLICE OCCUPANTS ALL GET OUT AND FIRE AT THE RAPIDLY RECEADING ECTO 1.

Go to 6

6. BREECH OF THE PEACE

Just when you thought you'd lost the Cops, a black Porsche pulls onto the road behind you and begins to pursue. A large swastika hangs out of one window and a Luger firing Nazi out of the other. Long range PKE detectors in Ecto 1 might register a periodically materialized ghost. The Machine That Goes Ping will do so if your D6 rolls an unnatural "1". It is Gerry/Plenck. Go to 7.

7. FAILING TO STOP AT A POLICE ROADBLOCK

They mean business this time. There is an 18 wheeler blocking the road. If the Ghostbusters are going at least FAST and are prepared to leave 40SP of roof behind, they can drive underneath. If they do, go straight to 10.

The only other alternative is to crash through a line of traffic cones and a sign onto a road that's conspicuously empty (Go to 8 below). Closely followed by the Ecto-Porsche (which incidentally can go under the truck without damage, it being A Tiny European Car), Plenck will use his Animate power on the traffic cones causing them to cluster onto the Ecto-mobile and begin devouring it at a rate of one SP per round per cone (actual numbers up to the GM). Only way to get them off is to send someone out with a proton pack. That'll keep the passengers busy.

Other suggestions for spicing up things in the car are The Oil Leak (see the film) and The Possession, in which Plenck uses his Zip and possession power to try and gain control of Ecto 1. Yes, you too can play out your favourite scenes from The Exorcist in the middle of the car! Will they ever get the green vomit out of the upholstery?

8. DRIVING ALONG AN UNFINISHED ROADWAY

But, this isn't just any piece of unfinished road. This will eventually be Chicago's first "Sky-Over", a road that carries its users way over the town centre traffic below. Unfortunately, it's not finished. This long empty road goes straight up into empty space.

At this point, with the Nazis behind them and the void in front, the Supreme Being will interfere on the Ghostbuster's side. No matter what extremely unlikely stunt they try and pull, it will succeed (as in the film) but unfortunately the Nazis won't. A spectacular fall from this height will incapacitate Gerry, but Plenck will still be around for the final showdown.

If they go back down the road, they will have to cross over onto another lane again. They have a choice: one is covered in National Guard troops, the other is clear... but going the wrong way. Go to 9 and then 1 (Wrong way road) or 10 (National Guard road block).

9. DRIVING THE WRONG WAY UP A FREEWAY DOWNRAMP

Wow! Look at all that traffic! All coming right at you! Unless they do one awesome U-turn (one roll at double the indicated difficulty) and start following the traffic out of Chicago (start at 1 again), they must roll 10 times to avoid losing 5 SP each hit.

SLOW= +13, FAST= +14, V.FAST= +15, INDY 500= +17. (No police. They've learnt their lesson by now.).

Having completed that, the way to 12 is clear for you. Even if you have to complete it on foot...

10. FAILING TO STOP AT A NATIONAL GUARD ROAD BLOCK

Yes another roadblock, but this one has tanks. There is a small gap between the two tanks, but an awful lot of weaponry is aimed at the guys. There is an alternative: on their left is a shopping mall (See 11). If they go for the roadblock (Brownie points and stiff upper lips all round) whistle the last post. Mass sounds of weapons being cocked.

Luckily that Supreme Dude is still watching them, and if they are going V.FAST or above (slower takes 20 SP damage from near misses), every single bullet and shell will miss and strike the car immediately behind. All four wheels and the engine of the car, be it Porsche or leading cop will be blasted off. It will then skid to a blasted halt.

Even if the Porsche is completely destroyed Plenck can materialize in front of the startled soldiers and continue using Zip.
11. MALICIOUS DESTRUCTION OF AN ENTIRE SHOPPING MALL

Each round they are in the Mall the players must make a difficulty roll to avoid demolishing a randomly determined shop. First, roll to see the shop they are hurtling to avoid.

SHOPS TO BE DEMOLISHED TABLE
2. Greengrocers
3. Burger Bar (Fragile. With a Volvo owners club meeting inside.)
4. Cafe
5. Liquor store
6. Malt shop
7. Pet store
8. D.I.Y. store (Full of paint)
9. Drug store
10. High class fashion store (full of dummies)
11. Hardware Store
12. Sex Shop (full of ...well, whatever)

Driving through a shop does 1SP of damage.

SLOW = +5,   FAST= +10,   V.FAST= +15,  INDY 500 =+20.

Everything the Ectomobile misses will be hit by 1-3 cop cars and jeeps. Cool characters can grab stuff from the shops as they hurtle through (+10 on Cool). The car will of course be covered in debris anyway. The Ecto-porsche will hit each shop 50% of the time and after hitting three will halt. The only way out is to drive straight through a wall: this will do 20 SP damage, but will get them on a road straight to the city centre and the Cook County Assessors Office.

12. CLIMAX

Suddenly they are driving across a beautiful pedestrian plaza sending happy-go-lucky natives scattering for cover. They pull up outside a large black building with "IRS" conspicuously prominent.

The last Ghostbuster out of the car must immediately make a +15 Cool roll to avoid slamming the car door. If he fails, and Ecto 1 has taken more than 60 points of damage, the heroic vehicle will instantly collapse into a pile of scrap (with possibly one last pathetic ping from the ever-mysterious machine).

Once inside the building, they must find the right office. If you are feeling particularly cruel at this point you can put them through the relevant Routine (see GM Book). However, bear in mind the police and National Guard right on their trail. Once on the right floor and in the right office they find that Steven Speilberg, working here part time, is having a lunch break.

Almost supernaturally successful film Director

Mr Speilberg can quickly be convinced to open the office up, but before he can get the paperwork ready, the lights suddenly blow out and Plenck erupts through the floor, carrying a Bazooka! Luckily, he is an awful shot and only a few brownie points, and a lot of scenery can be lost. Driven mad by vengeance and by being dead anyway, Plenck then fights to the end, possibly even using Possess on one of the Ghostbusters (or even Steven Speilberg, who will then go on to make an even better version of "Poltergeist").
With the Nazis safely disposed of, the ghostbusters are free to hand over the gold shortly before the forces of Law arrive in heavily armed numbers.

THE AFTERMATH

The Orphanage is saved. But the police want blood. If you are determined to follow the events of the film, they are headed for the Juliet (as in prison) prison band, whether they can sing or not. A large trial is in order at least. They'll have to defend themselves of course (no sane lawyer will touch this case, though Tully might be persuaded after his incredible performance in Ghostbusters 2) but luckily they have all the cute kids and nuns of the orphanage on their side, together with Sparky who will ensure a great deal of public support.

The truth is, they can't lose the trial, as the Mayor, in the best Chicago tradition is a militant Catholic who is ecstatic that American Weird Science is now serving the Pope (apparently) and has bribed the jury. Not only will they go free, they will be invited to set up a local franchise and be presented with a replacement car. As so much of the police force was destroyed in the chase, they've decided to sell of the survivors and equip the whole force anew with Ford Jelly Molds.

There is an inevitable "Sparky: the Movie".

If the players have the chicken, shame on you; she could have become a future arch nemesis in hiding. Use of the Aura Video Analyzer will confirm that she is possessed by the spirit of Adolf Hitler, a fact that Egon recommends should be kept secret, if only to keep Mossad off your backs.

Finally the players are presented with one of the surviving police cars: smaller than Ecto - 1, but with a 440 cubic inch cop power plant, cop tires, cop shocks, the works. Only problem is the cigarette lighter doesn't work.

NOTES FOR CONVERTING THE OOZE BROTHERS TO AD&D

Change all references from Chicago to "Tekupiq", a charmingly beautiful semi-medieval Land besieged on all sides by the Forces of Darkness which threaten to swamp the hobbits with democracy, hospitals, human rights, central heating, foreign aid etc..

The Madonna is a Statuette of Futility (+3) giving the wearer +5 Charisma, -10 Intelligence and subsequent craving for herring in sour cream.

Ecto-1 is a Moldybeanean War Galley, seating 50 in comfort and 150 in desperate circumstances. Maneuverability is 1G per rounded; phaseturn and observation is also good (Otherwise treat as a Volvo). The stereo is OK, if you like monotonous percussion. *

The Creature From Beyond can be either a Lich (18th Level with unlimited Disintegrate), or a two piece dinner with coleslaw & fries.

Father Charles is a 10th level Bard/Monk. Carrie Fisher is the Princess of Tekupiq, John Lee Hooker is the Emperor of the Blues and Tom Jones is a small brown coffee stain on your GMs screen called SIMON.

* If using these rules don't let them try the parking maneuver outside the restaurant.
