It was great that I had learned about design in Bachelor's degree, because at there I learned how important of the concept, applied art which is in between science and art, and habit of paying intensive attention for the users (or customers) of the products and entire design processes. At NIDA, I learned more about management and deeper details about information system and statistics.

My interesting involves software engineering which treats software development in engineering manner rather than craft, software project management, business, marketing, self improvement, ect.
