

Japanese Mons

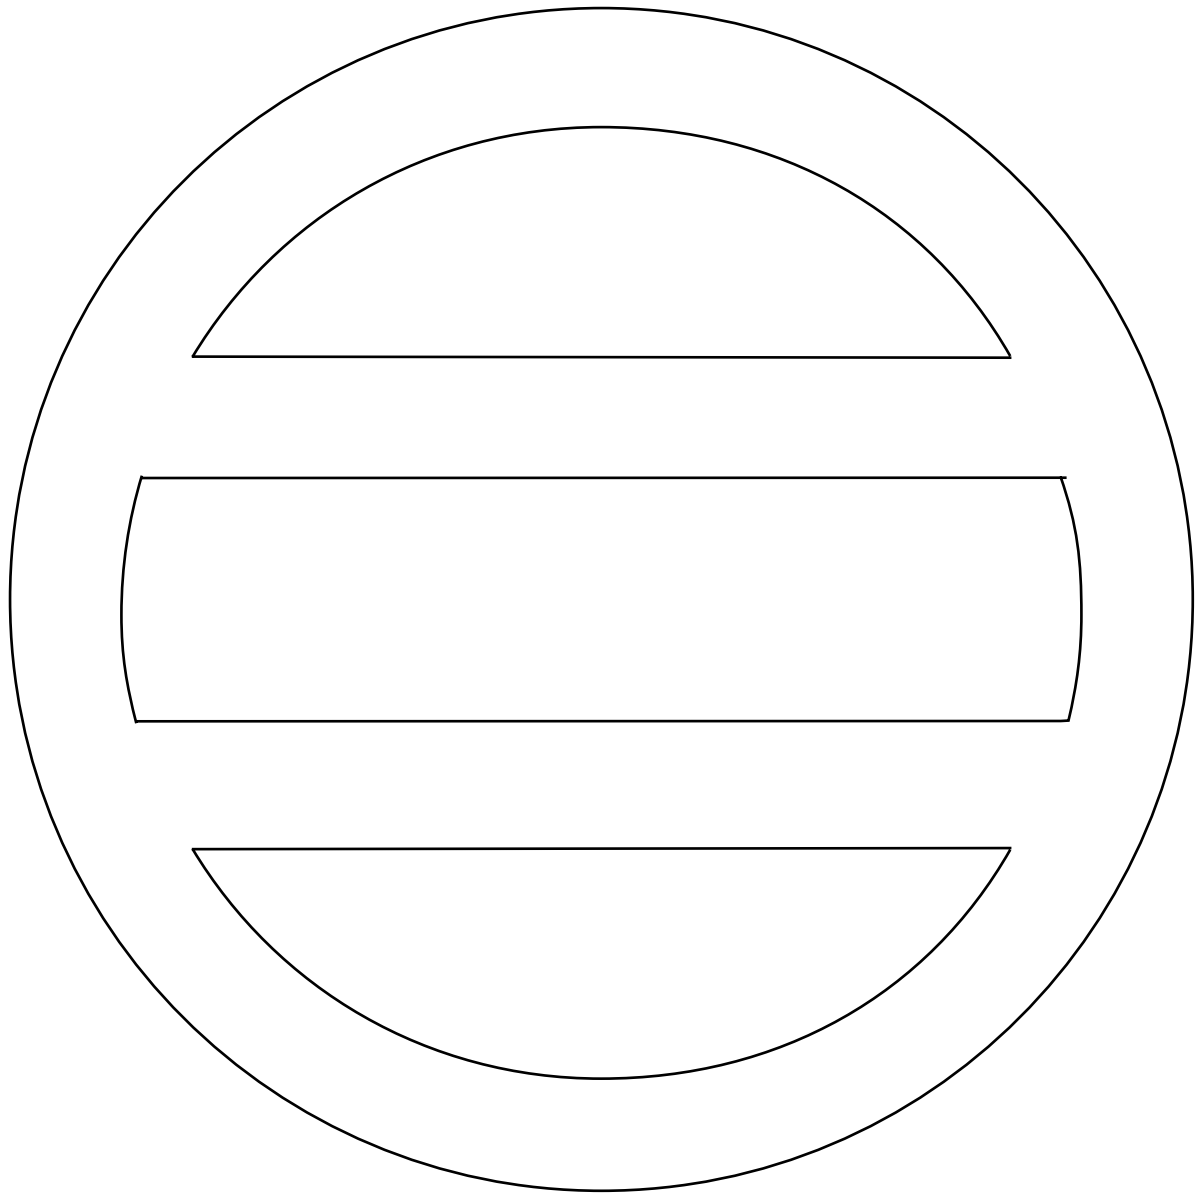

The illustrations are Japanese Mons, or house tokens.

Each Mon represents a different house.

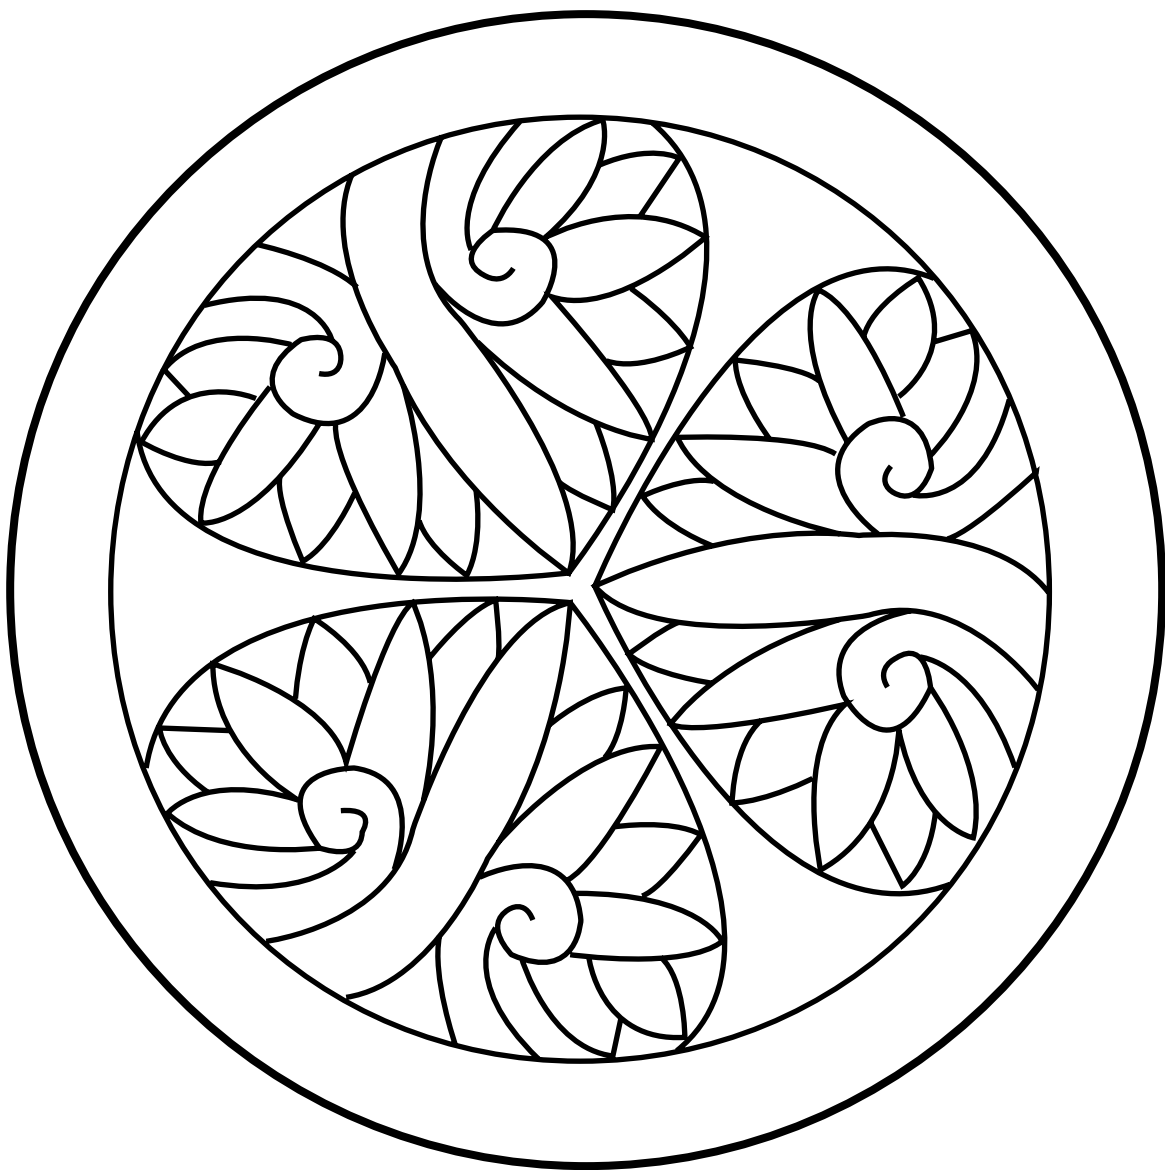

These decorations would appear on weapons, armour, clothing, in rooms, and on furniture.

The upper class Japanese would have his Mon in three different places upon his kimono.

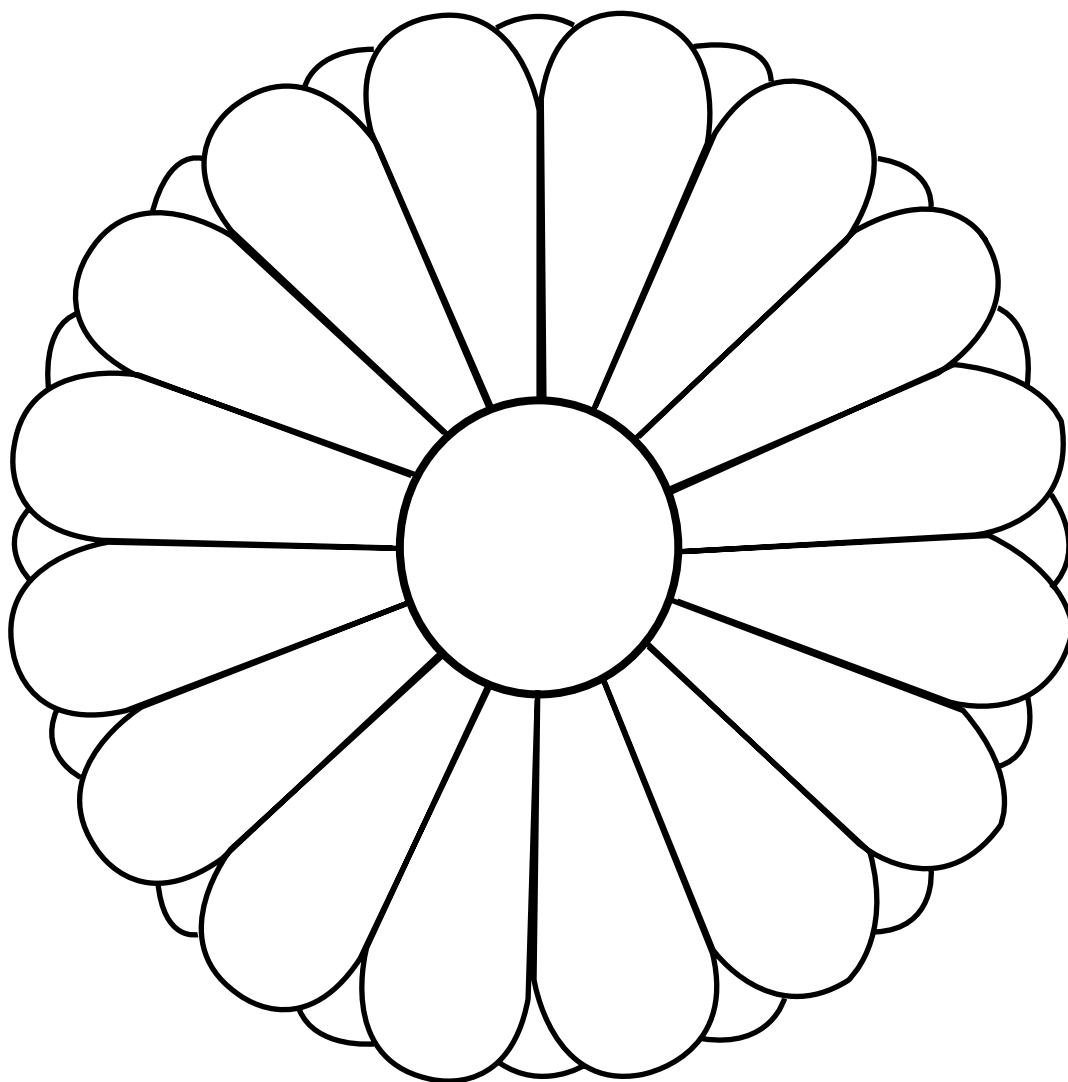

Eliza Fegley
eliza@sacredspiral.com
PO Box 4381
Reading, PA 19606

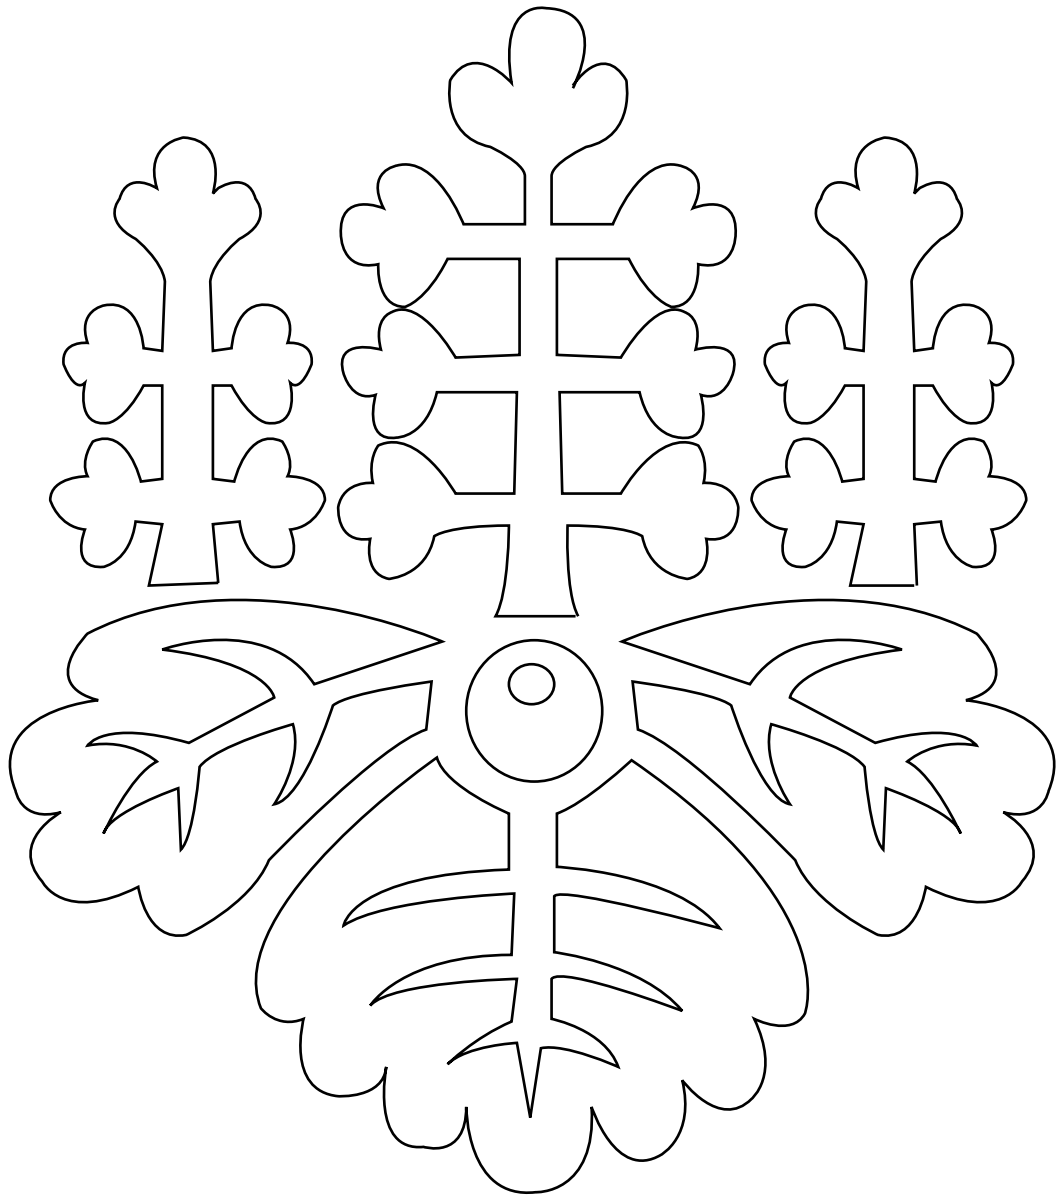

Family token (mon) of the
House of Minamoto
Ashikaya.

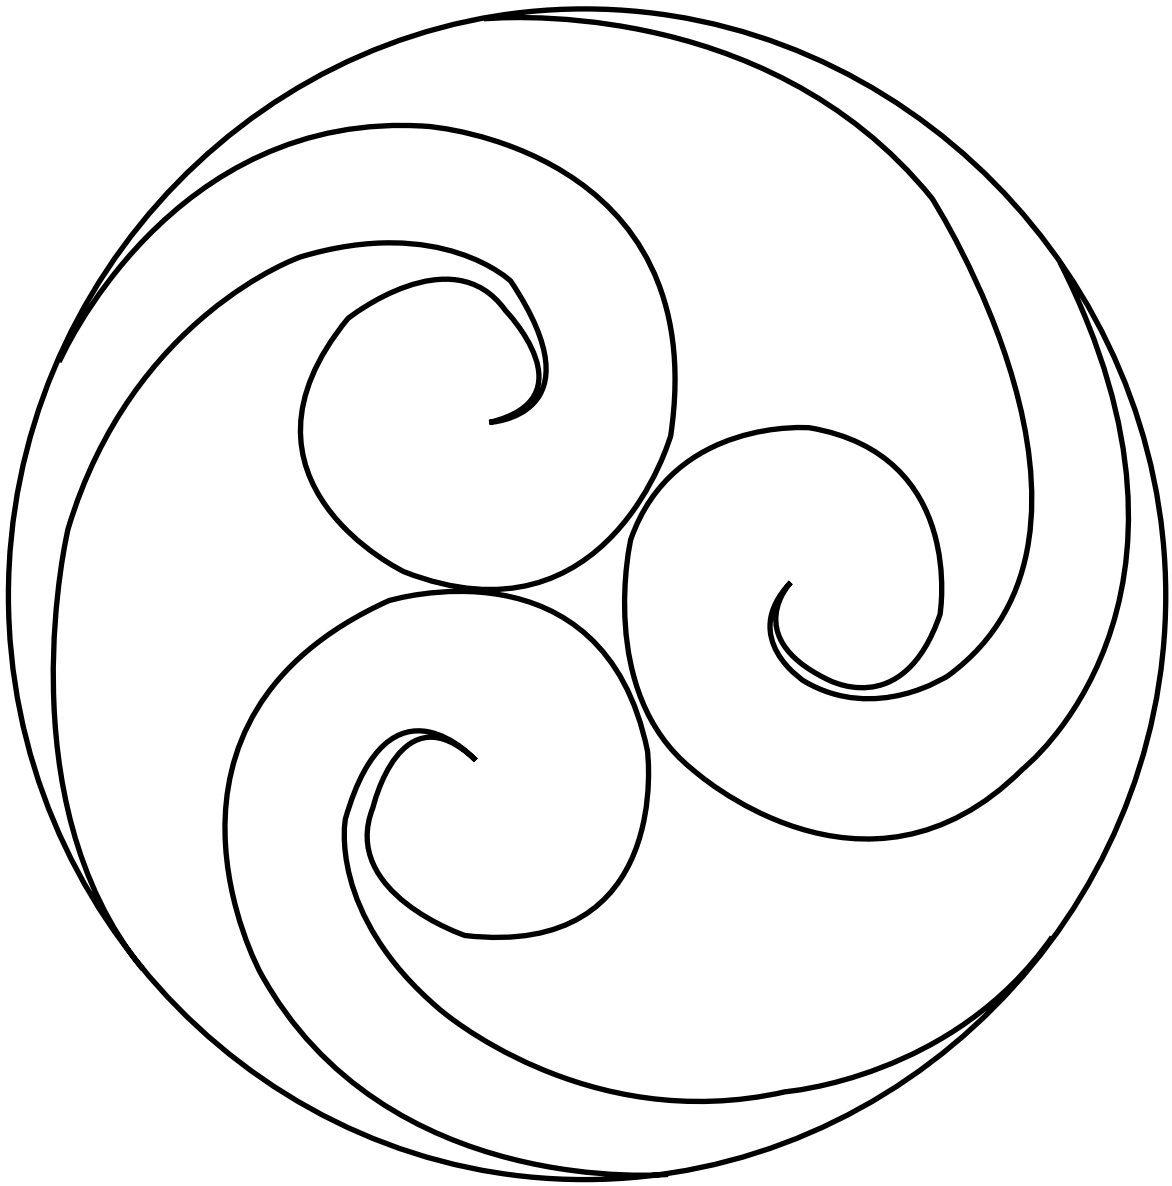

Awoi-mon.
Family token of the
House of Minamoto
Tokugawa.

Kiku-non-hana-mon.
State Mon of Japan.

Kiri-mon.
Family token of the Mikado.

Tomoye.
Family token of the House of Arina.