Glad to hear you are always feeling a little bit better and stronger every day. Hope you are really able to enjoy the warm weather we are having - get a nice tan!

I'm just on my way to church to offer the Liturgy. Tonight we are honoring all the young men and women in the Scouting Program. I always enjoy visiting with them because they have so much vitality and do so many interesting projects.

So again, I will also remember you at the Liturgy, with the sincere prayer that you will keep on improving. Always remember, God does love you Tracy and He really cares about you. Peace, Love and Joy - Fr. John

Thanks for the update today. Even though I saw you this week, and know how well you're doing, I check your site daily because I love to read your journal entries (as does everyone, I'm sure).

The fact that you're putting a "regimen" in place is great, and SO you - always the planner!

I heard you were going to Anna and Matt's shower this weekend. That should be fun. Our little Maggie N. gets married in a matter of weeks, and we're having a shower for her on Thursday 7/7 over the lunch hour - I hope you can make it.

All for now. I'll see you again on Monday. Looking forward to it.

Love,
Margie

I wanted to stop by and tell you that I have been thinking about you a lot over the past months! It was so awesome to get to talk to you the other week! Tricia and I talk about you daily, and we both look forward to spending time with you and Scott in the near future!

I wanted to let you know that Tricia and I could have run for you all day long! I will admit that getting up early on a Saturday to run isn't always my first idea of fun, but on that day it didn't bother me one bit!

Keep being strong and if you need someone to chat with just tell Tricia to hand over the phone!

If it is possible to blog good vibes to you--I am doing it. I will keep you in my thoughts and prayers. Sounds like you are handling the treatment really well. It can't be fun--but if the Knight Rider reruns make you feel better--you go girl! Personally, I can't live a day without a Seinfeld or a Raymond rerun. Whatever works! Love the site, but it is pretty hard to get in, cuz you must be having a lot of activity. Let us know if you need any magazines from Hearst. We will send you a basket of mags from time to time. Cheers! Robin

I'm really happy to hear you're feeling better. And by all means, get out and enjoy the weather. It was beautiful today.

Looking forward to seeing you on Monday.

Thanks for the response, it's nice to read how upbeat you are despite everything. I'm sure your great attitude contributes a lot to your recovery. I think of you every time I see a Target commercial - they are the BEST! Seriously, those are the only commercials I DON'T surf through because they are so cool! I don't know how people think up such cool stuff. We non-artistic people really appreciate it! Stay positive and happy and know that we're all praying for you.

Elizabeth Freeman e-mailed me with the news of your condition and this website address created by Lisa and Jenn. My heart broke when I read that you were ill. I cannot begin to express how much I want to hug you and make everything better. This is really the only way I can reach out to you being I'm so far away. I would love to haul you around town, or make you one of my signature casseroles (ground chuck, a can of cream of mushroom soup, frozen veggies and tator tots), but I think your doctors would advise against eating it.

Please know that when people tell you to call them anytime, they really mean it. It is evident by the messages on this website that your friends and family want to do everything they can to help you. (Note that I have an unlisted phone number.)

One area that I can assist you with is your daytime viewing schedule. Now I prefer "Good Morning, America" to start off the day followed by "Live with Regis and Kelly". I then switch to CBS and c'mon down with Bob Barker. After the showcase, I see if Cricket and Paul are back together on "The Young and the Restless". That takes us to noon when I settle in with "The Days of Our Lives". Once again, I switch back to ABC and watch "One Life to Live". When will Asa find a good woman?! Might as well watch "General Hospital" and think back to the good ol' days of Luke and Laura. Now it's time to get my daily therapy from Dr. Phil and Oprah. @#%$!! It's now five o'clock and I'm still in my jammies!!! You are too? Oh, good. Now it's time to check out Food Network and catch "30 Minute Meals with Rachel Ray. No, I'll never make any of the stuff she does, but it's fun pretending that I could whip up a three course meal in less than an hour. 5:30 pm...this is when I shower. Time for the evening news with Cindy! After the news, I watch "Wheel of Fortune" and laugh and laugh as one man guesses "More fun than a barrel of vikings". That takes us to prime time and you're one your own. You know, it really does feel good to help other.

Please know that I will pray for you every morning. I will pray for your continued positive (and humorous) attitude and the courage to handle whatever physical challenges you may face. Again, if I could hug you right now, I would. I will continue to check this website for your updates.

Peace and love,

It looks like you will start your treatment protocol this week and I just wanted to share that little tid-bit of info. I had. We will be thinking of you and sending our prayers your way this week!! Like everyone else who cares so much about you, I check your website most every day. The last update you gave us was such wonderful news. The good Lord certainly is listening to everyone's prayers.

I got the opportunity to talk to your good family friend Pat Horvath yesterday. She just heard about your condition from one of the other teachers in West Bend and was able to get my phone number to get some information. That was the first that she had heard. I shared with her your address and phone number and updated her on everything I could. She does not have a computer at home but was hoping to view it real soon at a friend's home. She also asked for an update on your parent's home & health in Minocqua and she had heard Mike got married so I told her what I could about that too. I'm sure you will be hearing from her soon, if you didn't already.

I have to tell you how great the pictures are on your site. It was great to see the family photo @ Michael & Korina's wedding and the "Beer Goggles" football shot is priceless (you go girl)!

It's also been great to hear you and Scott have had a chance to go out with friends and have some social normalcy.

Tracy - I hope that good news keeps coming your way. It will be good for you to have your MRI over so you can get some more questions answered. All of us in the family think of you all the time and will continue praying for good news.

Keep that beautiful smile and attitude!

Comments: U GO GIRL !! GOOD NEWS

Missing two chromosomes, wow, reading it sounds like your missing something from an embryo. But this is the good news you were waiting for!

You are trying to take an afternoon nap and can't fall asleep??? Borrow Korina's blankie and the sound machine. That will definitely put you in control of your sleep (more like "in control of Korina's prize possessions)!!

Mike and Korina had Mothers Day at their house. Grilled on the new deck, which is very nice. Mike did a nice job.

Of course Korina helped by staying out of his way.

Lauren was there and not certain you are aware but she has been crawling the past week. Plus she has learned to whine. Being a Gramma, I get to laugh at it all and say, "what comes around goes around".

Dave and I will close on our house May 31st. Fortunately the only wallpaper I have to strip is from both bathrooms and some border wallpaper in the kitchen, living room and hall.

Can't wait to get in there and start working on it, painting etc.

Oh, you may enjoy this. The LR/DR carpet is a really true grass green. The green matched the foliage in the pictures hanging on the wall. The realtor said all we need to do is paint the ceiling sky blue with some clouds and have a picnic, just like at a park.

But for the current owners the color blended in quite well with their decor.

Guess I have babbled on long enough.
Keep those smiles, it seems events are turning in your favor.
For now, Mary (Korina's mom)

Traci;

The Website is really a great idea. It was very informative to go through the medical updates in your daily logs..

There is not a day that goes by where I do not think of you and wonder how you are doing.. It is so great to hear about all the local support you are getting from your friends and co-workers in Minnesota.. (I take back 20% of all the nasty things I have said about Viking fans.)

It sounds like you have found a very competent Doctor that you are comfortable with.. I am sure it is reassuring to have someone you really trust as you start taking the next steps of treatment..It was good to hear about the chromosome results..Sounds like chemo only would be the preferred way to address the rest of the tumor..

I hope to see your dad over the next few days (turkey hunting)and I am looking forward to spending a few days with him.. I am sure both Bob and Joan will be glad once they can finally move into their new home..

We all got together for Mother's day yesterday on the farm.. As usual there was too much good food and of course I had to have second and thirds. It was nice to hear that you had a chance to spend Mother's day with your friend's family (OK, now I am willing to take back 30% of all the nasty things I have said about Minnesota people)..

Well that is it for now.. Keep up the positive attitude and remember we are all thinking about you and praying for continued good news..

It seems like you are handling everything so well. I'm very proud of you! I've been thinking of you often, and you have been in my thoughts and prayers. The Beer Goggles just haven't been the same without you around. Hudie has been doing a great job pitching, but we certainly miss him at 1st. Josh was so thrown off by having to play first, it caused him to have to wear the pink shirt! I think that was a first for him. We're going to call him Josh the strikeout king. =) Two weeks ago, Matt had his chance at the mound. Let's just say, it's the only game we've lost so far. I'm sure it was something else. We had Scooby snacks in your honor two weeks ago too. They were a great finish to our loss.

Anyway, we really do miss you, and we think about you every week at the game.

Something that may or may not help you right now, is something that I've been told in the past, and I truly believe. God doesn't ever give us anything in life that we can't handle. So, I believe that makes you one strong woman.

I hope to see you soon Tracy!
Love you lots,
Erica

We are friends of your parents. Your mom worked with us at Green Tree in West Bend. I just learned of your webpage and it is much more thorough than the one I am using. We have a few things in common Tracy. One thing I want you to hear is that the power of prayer is great. Your journal entries are wonderful and you are definitely loved, yes even by people you do not know. We will continue to check your webpage and pray, pray, pray for your healthy recovery. God Bless, Lisa and Chris

I told your mom how awesome your website is, and how upbeat you sounded about everything. You are a very intelligent and remarkable young woman, and I am impressed by all the details you are giving, which really helps me to know exactly what's going on -
- keep it up!

You are in our thoughts much, and we told your folks that with all the love and support you are getting, you can beat this thing! More later, Jean and Mike and Roxie (a bigger version of Sage)

Yes, it's me again. I just sent you a "private" note, but felt compelled to send a this one, too. I have really appreciated reading all of the entries from your friends and family. So... I thought I'd make an attempt at keeping it going.

Based on all of the e-mails you received from MATT (hi, Anna), I gather you've missed a few softball games. Hopefully you'll make it to a game as a spectator one of these days. I know how committed you are!

We are looking forward to Erin's return, and hope you take comfort in the fact that one of your best buds will be filling in for you. I know you trust her to keep up with the business - and she will!

All for now, but I will definitely keep in touch. Love you much, and hope to see you this coming week.

This website is such a great idea! We family members here have been so anxious for any information about you but have been hesitant to ask Bob and Joan since they have been so busy with everything going on. I loved the pics on the website- you look fabulous!! Your attitude is truly amazing and inspirational. That sense of humor will help get you through the rough times, no doubt! I'm sure you are also very comforted by the love and support of your friends and family. Thanks so much for keeping us all informed through this website, and thank you to your friends for creating it and helping maintain it. Those of us here in Wisconsin are very grateful for the updates. We're all thinking about you a lot and praying for you. Keep that great attitude!!

Love,

I feel remiss in not getting in touch sooner-I just heard about your diagnosis. Part of the reason I have been so out of touch is that my step sister was diagnosed with brain cancer a week ago last Wednesday. I want her to come visit your site because of your positive outlook and general good spirits--what an inspiration!

We are also interested in your comments on treatment as she is receiving similar suggestions from her Dr. All my best to you, I will be checking in on you "virtually" often.

I just wanted to let you know that you are in my thoughts and prayers everyday. You are truly and inspiration to everyone, and from the rest of the entries in your guest book I think that everyone else agrees. Keep that strong and positive attitude and you will get through this. Like my mom said this is a hiccup in life and if anyone will overcome it, it's going to be you. I'll have to find out the next time Tricia comes to visit and maybe I'll be able to tag along, if you don't mind. This website is truly amazing as well as your co-workers are. It's makes the mileage between us seem a little less. Keep up the awesome attitude and we'll talk with you later.

Remember when we talked about repeating info to people?? I now know what you're going through. I just finished talking and explaining what I knew to Traci and Critter, (only 2 people) and I found myself asking them if I had already mentioned things before. And I had! And I didn't have brain surgery....so no excuses for me :)

Tracy, you are such a wonderful person/friend. There is so much I am learning from you.

Just got off the phone with my Mom and she said you and Tricia had a busy last few days...wish I could have come up with them but I'm sure you are very thankful I didn't considering I would have had to bring my entire entourage and let me just tell you they are not always a quiet group to say the least. So for now I will contain their well wishes in the form of beautiful artwork to decorate your house with...and you thought you had to deal with paperwork at work...just wait until you see the endless flow of artwork headed your way!! I told Tricia before she left to take you to the Spa for a little pampering (a nice pedicure or something) but it sounds like you guys were quite busy and just ran out of time....maybe the next visit! Anyway, I just wanted to let you know that your strength, courage and positive attitude are such an inspiration - keep it up girlfriend. The friends that helped you set up this website are phenomenal!!! And you are in our thoughts and prayers daily. Talk to you soon! Traci, Ross, Hailee, Alexis & Ashton (aka...Asherman).
